HONGHONG, FEBRUARY 15TH, 1876.

It is perhaps too much to expect that any public work or improvement designed by foreigners in China can be carried to a successful completion without meeting opposition of some sort in the course of construction. There are so many prejudices called forth by any proposed change, however beneficial it may liave been demonstrated to have proved where carried into operation, that little surprise is now excited by a sudden outburst of Chinege If the officials contrive at length fanaticism. to swother their disgust of an innovation, on finding that further opposition to it is not only useless but irritating, the people are then found to be violently antagonistic to it. and hence it is a most difficult matter for foreigners to inaugurate any new undertaking been put in and the ripging is being commenced in the Central Kingdom. It is a noticeable fact that when official obstruction ceases. mob demonstrations usually commence. In nine cases out of ten, however, these preprompted by the Authorities, who then unable to carry out their engagements with line, which had to be abandoned in consequence of the want of good faith shown on the part of the Anthorities, who, after contracting with the Great Northern Company to con- the Chinese Imperial Government, for detached struct the line, permitted the inhabitants of portions of Martini-Henry rifles in the rough, the district through which it puesed to destroy and plunder the material. It appears that the sale was not a regular transaction, inasmuch as the Vicorcy bad ordered that the tramway should not pass beyond Woosung Creek, but there is nothing to show that the owner was aware of this circumstance, and the proceedings taken against him can have no palliation. . It is to be hoped that the case will be taken up by the British Consul in good carnest, and that the officials concorned in this cruel and arbitrary exercise of power will be severely consured, if not dismissed, by the higher authorities. This exhibition of malice may otherwise, perhaps, be but the beginning of a sensuless but mischiovous opposition to the tramway, which may prove very annoying to those ongaged in the work of construction.

AN ASTRONOMICAL DIFFICULTY. handed in at a sitting of the Academy of Sciences. by M. Baills, on a still unexplained question of astronomy. In 1596 the Dutch pilot Barents, FIHE Undersigned, baving been appointed COTTON DRILL. E. long, from Paris. During their stay on this to an immediate discount of 20 %. ubospitable coast these Dutch mariners with nessed a singular phenomenon, the cause of which has remained unknown up to this day. the horizon, as it was expected to do, and the December for the quinquennial period then AMERICAN BACON. night was, in due course, to last until the 8th of ending. February. Instead of this, the sun respected on the 24th of January, a date which our author corrects from calculation, and tinds to have been the 25th. In short, daylight came on a fortnight earlier than was expected: On their return to Holland this piece of news they brought was received with universal incredulity, but Barones adduced an argument in support, which was decisive. It was this: -On that memorable 24th of January he had, at 6 o'clock n.w. observed a conjunction of the moon and Jupiter. Now this astronomical ovent was marked on the ephemerides of Venice for that day at one clock after midnight. This settled the onestion, and the only difficulty now remained, how to explain the premature return of the sun. The phenomenon was attributed to the great polar on any Building, or on Merchandise in the same, cold, and it was admitted that the refraction of at the usual rates, subject to a discount of the atmosphere cold, in certain cases, amount to Twenty per cent. (20 %) 41 deg. A long time after, about 1780, Lemonmor took up the matter, and found an error in the longitude, which Barentz seemed to have mistaken, and it might, therefore, be doubted whether he saw the conjunction at all. M. Baille has endeavoured to elucidate this point by taking up all the calculations again from the CAPITAL AND SURPLUS 800,000 TAELS beginning. He arrives at the conclusion that Barentz certainly committed an orror, but not that attributed to him by Lemonnier, whose calculation was wrong ; that Barentz, nevertheless, could have seen Inpiter in a line with the horns of the moon, and that the premature dividend of 15% for shareholders on Capital, appearance of the sun was caused by reflection, and thereafter distribute among Policy holders similar to that which produces the rainbow. THE DISASTER IN SWITZERLAND. The Journal des Débats of the 30th December dentains the following particulars of the frightful accident at a Christmas festival in Switzerhand. The scene of the accident was the schoolhouse of the village of Helliken, containing about 700 inbabitants, and one of the many villages in the fruitful valley of the Frickthal in the parish of Wogstetten, district of pared to GRANT INSURANCES at Current Rheinfelden, near the Swiss salt pita. It has I nlways been the custon in most of the Swiss villages to collect subscriptions amongst the well-to-do inhabitants for distribution amongst the achool-children as Obristmas gifts. Bverything had been prepared on this occasion in the neual way, and the children had nesembled a six o'clock in the evening of Obrietune Day, outside the school-house, in the company of their friends and parents, waiting impatiently for admittance to see the Ohristmas tree in order that they might receive their severa gifts. At a little after six o'clock the schoolmaster commenced lighting the Christmas tree. Having accomplished this, be opened the doors, when the crowd waiting outside rushed in one dense mass up the staircase leading to the room prepared upstairs for their reception. On their reaching the top of the second staircase the beams supporting the flooring suddenly gave I rine Risks to all parts of the World. The father and son are thus introduced to the reader :-

SON AND SIRE. Now on the road that leads from out the town, Appear two knights who slowly wend them down, Till reached the ground where still the meu-st-arms Practise the mimiery of war's alarms. Framed with the hair, in glossy masses thrown from forshead whiter than Carrara's stone. Her race's lineaments, clear cut and straight, Might show that sternness lived her nature a mote. Did not the smile that over them would steal Another mood, as favourite, reveal; Else had not dimples on the sunburned cheek Helped the eye's, merriment so aft to speak. O'er beauteons mouth and rounded chin there stayed Strength's haughty sign that power and will betrayed; But broken by a gentleness of soul That through her sledfast gaze in softness stole. Her form was strong and lithe. She came and made A slight obciennce, as though half afraid; Then stood-n coarse robe flowing to her feet, Each limb round shadowed in the fitful heat. And, like the glow that lighted her, there sped Through Guido's frame a pulse that unickly fled, But left his breathless gaze to feed upon The figure that, to him, like angel's shore "

Guido falls in love with her at first sight; and his admiration is so marked that the old man rallies bim about it :-"Ah I who can tell if noblest impulse lies Within the magic of the meeting eyes, .

Or if the ruin of a life be where The light falls softest on some golden bair?" The dawn of Lita's love for the Count's son, her joys and fears, her efforts to sun press her joy, and the increasing strength of her attachment, are told:--LITA AT HOME. And thus he entered, with a heart that bent, The house wheroin again her busy feet Moved, as it seemed to him, in music sweet. And as he sat, and watched how order grew Beneath her fingers, as they deftly drow Her tasks to end; her every look and word

His passion deepened, and his wonder stirred.

How could such blossom grow on salted soil,

Such bloom and beauty from a roce of toil,

Such grace and colour near the deadening array?" lovers converse togther, and Lita describes to him with artless grace her way of life :--

LITA'S OCCUPATIONS. "But 'tis not from your nets,' he said, ' alone You get your living, for you surely own Those trees that far around the sunlight break? No, no, she answered; 'tis but ou's to shake. Their laden branches with the topering cane And cause the clives' full of fruitful rain ! To gather them in baskets till they fill The dusty flooring of the busy mill. But in a little garden, all mine own, Some beauteous palms, beloved of God, have grown, And of their drooping fringes I may keep Some liere, to grace the day of those who sleep In martyrs' graves beyond the echoing deep: Some for their place of martyrdom, I well : To those, they say, who near their ashes dwell." He, asking where this Eden garden lay ? Watched her fair figure outlined gainst the day That, through the open window near him, shone And let her eager speech, unchecked, flow on, As with her lifted hand, she pointed where A palm-tree shot aloft to woo the glare; Then showed each shot in narrow sirguit round.

The main incidents of the story follow, and the past relates how the Saracons, and carry ber off, when culling nosegays in the vale of Enga; how Guido fits out a squadron to attack the Moors; how Lita escapes the stronghold of Sirad is worth giving :-

Where traces of her simple life were found."

LITA SLEEPING. "She slept, or won it but a dreadful Ewgon, That made her lie so still at first ?- but soon If it were such, it passed into a sleep; With breathings low, and regular, and deep : And o'er the features drawn by anxious pain A blessed contentment now began to reign. The parted lips, and placed face expressed, No sign that Trouble stayed within the breast The outer clamour of the harrying feet, That sounder loudly o'en in this retreat. MICHEL ANGELO AND THE SIEGE

OF FLORENCE. The people of Florence, at the end of the fifteenth century and the beginning of the The Marquis of Lorne has brought out his sixteenth, bad lost the greatness of earlier which are displayed in the works executed to the order or princes; and, indeed, in some of these, we may read his silent protest. It was certainly not by chance that Michel Angelo selected for the tomb of Julius II. -the pope who proclaimed war upon foreigners with the motto, "Out with the barbarians" (Fouri i barbari) - the figure of Moses, the priest and captain of the liberation of the Hebrew people from the yoke of the Pharaohs. The verses, too, which he Tis sweet to sleep : who would not be of slone; While shame and sorrow make the world their own?

Happy are they, who see, or feel, nor know; Therefore awake me not, I pray, speak low; These verses were written when Florence was groaning under the roke of the execrable Duke Alexander, and show plainly enough after millions of years, its present surface was what were the secret feelings of Michel assumed. Life began at a very early period Angelo toward the tyrants of his country, in the waters when they were still warm, and and heights of artistic expression he might covered the entire globe. Vegetables and have attained, had he resolutely emancipated animals, we suppose, were at first only bimself from servitude to princes. It is sad, simple round cells, and afterwards became on the other hand, to mark that he not only more complicated and varied. They were served the Medici before the ruin of the all marine. This atmosphere was too Republic, but after its fall, remained in heavily charged with carbonic acid to the service of Clement VII. We must there- support air-breathing animals, except the fore, with sincere sorrow, refuse to join in very lowest amphibian kind. But in proextolling the character of Michel Angelo as a cess of time this gas was absorbed by great a man, upon an emergency in which coal and cart onate of lime. His antiquity Florentine committee of defence and to dates back, we cannot say how long, but it is threatened to take possession of the city, he hundred thousand,-The Origin of the Stars timidly made his escape from it. When he By Jacob Ennie, A.M. was informed that the citizens had a prospect of making good their defence, he returned thither, and engaged in strengthening the fortifications. After the fall of the city, he remained in his studio, accepting the patronuge of Pope Clement VII., the chief agent in bringing about the ruin of Florence. This was not conduct worthy of a great man, and the more exalted the genius which stooped to such cowardly acts, the less should they command our approval. But the people of of deceiving themselves, and forget facts in brder that the image their admiration has created may not be defaced or diminished. In this manner it was for a long time asserted that Michel Angelo never took flight from Florence in fear; but a letter written by his own hand, and removing every doubt, has now been recovered and given to the world. The original letter, sent from Venice to his friend Battista della Palla, is preserved in the Buonarrotti archives It is as follows:-

THE ORDER OF CREATION. When the solid crust of the earth was still red hot, all the waters were floating in the form of vapour in the stmosphere. With such a coating, how slowly, according to Professor Tyndall's researches, must the earth's heat have radiated away! But as it Dryden, and the scene is laid on the fringe Michel Angelo, or of awarding his genius its cooled, the vapour condensed, settled down, plotely enveloping the solid globe. Whoever near an iron furnace, has seen the solid, glassy fishing and pastoral inhabitants of that butions were to his material prosperity, they slag, anhydrous and overcharged with lime, rain, can imagine that much of the solid crust of the earth, anhydrous and overcharged with alkalies, must have dissolved into a soft muddy mass when the waters first came down. That mass became the ready material for being afterwards washed away by ocean corrents, and laid out into stratified aqueous rocks. The heat of our globs continued to radiate away, and contraction followed. But the liquid in- Handkerchiofe, Blue por dos. 0.60 a 0.70 terior, like all liquids, contracted in volume more than the solid exterior crust. That crust, therefore, became too large. Honce it wrinkled into furrows, to suit the diminshed placed upon the group of Sleep and Night, at size of the globe. The downward bends of the tomb of Giulian de Medici, are well known: the furrows formed the ocean floor, and the upward bends became the islands and contipents. At first the lauds were low level and moist; then the surface became more undulating as the furrowing increased; then bills and mountains were raised up; valleys were scooped out by running waters; and atlength We must rather lament that so the lime and by the land plants, forming reason for suspecting him of half-heartedness | chalk, limestone, and marble. THE QUEEN OF JAMES II.

The Chevalier was obliged to quit St. Germains August 11th. Middleton accompanied him as his principal adviser. He was the only Reman Catholic in the retinue; and the Chevalier took with him a clergyman of the Church of England to perform divine service for his followers of the reformed faith They were allowed to remain a few days at after ages, with their hero-worship, are fond Livry, and during that time the mother and son frequently met. On learning that the Queen had been seized with illness, James came over to Chaillot to see her; and on the following Tuesday she went to Livry to dine with him, accompanied by Lady Middleton who had to part also with her husband for an indefinite time, and several of her of ber ladies. The Duke de Lauzun lent his coach for the accommodation of those attendants for whom there was no room in the Queen's vehicle. They returned to Chaillot at eight o'clock in the evening. The Chevalier I left there, as I suppose you know, intend-ing to go to France. On arriving at Venice | 6th. He was almost totally unprovided with I inquired about the way, and was informed money for his journey; Mr. Diccouson, the that the journey from here leads through Queen's trassurer, having endeavoured in part of Germany, and that it is dangerous and difficult travelling. I have therefore resolved to wait for an answer from you, if it please you, and if you are now disposed to go, to urge you to do so; and accordingly, I on the tollowing morning. In three days beg you to inform me of this, and where you wish me to await you, and we will go together.

I came away without so much as a farewell dence should be agreed on between France to any of my friends, and in extreme con- and the Allies. On October 27th sidings of fusion; and though, as you know, I desired the alarming illness of Louis XIV. plunged the Queen and her ladies into the greatest asked leave to go without obtaining it, it was consternation and anxiety. At this time he not that I had not the fortitude to await seemed their only protector; on his life, depended, they believed, their sole security day morning, September 21st, there came to that a regent would continue the pension to "Oh, my God !" exclaimed the Queen, after reading Madame de Maintenon's report of the home with me, and direct there, and brought for his family, and for us poor unfortunates!" She and her ladies wept bitterly. The Queen was foo auxious to eat. Lady Middicton read a chapter out of the "Imitation of Carist," eudeavouring to console ber misbecause I am longing to be gone; and if you tress and berself, but their spirits remained no longer have a mind to go, yet, I pray, so sadly depressed. Morning, however, brought, especially one Sirad, pounce upon Lita, and inform me that I may take measures to go bleeding well, and was out of danger. Lady Middleton and the Queen's other ladies, although strict Roman Catholics were not so through the agency of a woman who hated Michel Angelo knew that his presence was entirely detached from the world as their Sirad, and carries valuable information to carnestly desired in France, at the Court of royal mistress. They grew utterly weary of the old knight; how there is a fight, in Francis I., who had already made many the continual prayers and monotony of a which Guide's father is struck down, and efforts to obtain works of his; but his friend conventual life, and entreated the Queen to Lita tends him ; and how he assents to their Battista della Palla, who perhaps had not return to St. Germains. Had she followed union, which Count William of Provence the same prospects of personal advancement her own inclinations, she would never have comes in the very nick of time to ratify. to draw him to France, and who had an gone back there. "Alas!" she said to the The following description of Lita sleeping in opportunity, remaining in Florence, to bear nuns, "picture to yourselves the state in the opinions expressed there concerning the which I shall find myself in that place, where flight of Michel Angelo, to observe how I lost the King, my lord and husband, and much delight it gave to the great artist's my daughter. Now that I am deprived of my enemics, saw also, on the other hand, that son what a frightful solitude does it appear! I the hopes of the Florentines that they would shall be compelled to eat alone in public successfully defend their city, were growing and when the repast is ended, and I retire stronger. He therefore, instead of writing to my cabinet, who will there be to speak to to Michel Angelo that he would join him, there? Here I find, at least, a little made haste to implore him, to return im- society. I had hoped to remain here mediately to Florence; and soon after, as he always." After much prayerful consideradid not return, wrote again, with still more tion, however, and consultation with friends warmth, and with such effect that Michel she become convinced that the present Angelo abandoned every other purpose, position of her son's affairs made and resolved to return to his native recessary that she should reside for part of land and perform the duty of a good the year, at least, at St. Germains, and keep
